We suggest

STAFF RECOMMENDATIONS:

BOOKS THAT MADE US FALL BACK IN LOVE WITH READING

The Henna Artist by Alka Joshi

The story was captivating and emotional. I couldn't wait to find out where it was going. I listened to the audiobook and the narrator, Sneha Mathan, did a lovely job reading it.

— Amy Carroll, adult/teen programming coordinator

Percy Jackson & the Olympians by Rick Riordan

When I get in a reading slump I like to go back and read the books I loved growing up. One of my favorites is Percy Jackson & the Olympians by Rick Riordan. Revisiting old favorites helps me regain the motivation to read.

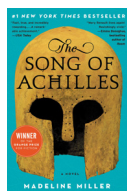

— Andrea Holt, outreach services assistant

Ready Player One by Ernest Cline

After what seemed like the 500th day of March 2020, the universe gifted me with nothing to do. I needed a great adventure (not my go-to) and Cline's cleverly crafted story fit the bill. I cheered, cussed, and winced for Wade, and finished its 375 pages in less than 4 days.

— Craig Branch, adult/teen services programmer, Carrico/Fort Thomas Branch

The Song of Achilles by Madeline Miller

Although it is a retelling of a story from Greek mythology, Miller's story feels fresh and kept me guessing about how things would turn out. It reminded me of how strong an emotional connection I can have to a book, especially after a reading slump.

— Katherine Sallee, information services assistant, Carrico/Fort Thomas Branch

Never Fear... Fine Free is Here, continued from the cover

We're vanquishing overdue fines once and for all. Moving to a fine-free model is in line with what library systems across the country have enacted based on extensive research which conclude that overdue fines do not ensure the return of borrowed items. They do, however, keep patrons from accessing valuable services.

The library paused overdue fines in March 2020 due to the pandemic, which saw an overwhelmingly positive response and the return of many items once considered lost.

In 2019, the American Library Association passed a resolution stating that fines "create a barrier to the provision of the library and information services" and urged systems to eliminate them. But what does going fine free mean for you? Read on to find out.

What does fine free mean?

There will no longer be overdue fines on books, magazines, movies, video games and other materials. Items still need to be returned so that everyone may enjoy them. Materials more than 60 days overdue will be considered lost, and a replacement fee will be charged.

Why are you eliminating fines?

Fines often penalize already vulnerable individuals who can't afford them - the very people who often need the library most. We want everyone to feel welcome in the library and be able to use our resources to unlock their full potential. Our role is to provide equal access to the programs, services and materials patrons need to pursue their goals without creating unnecessary financial barriers.

What are the benefits of going fine free?

Library systems that have eliminated overdue fines experienced positive results, including increases in circulation and the number of people using their library. Other benefits include improving patron relationships with the library; redirecting staff time toward patron-focused services rather than handling fines; students returning to use homework resources and increased library card registrations.

Will I have to wait longer for my holds?

Research indicates that fine-free libraries have not experienced an uptick in late returns but rather have seen declines. Wait times for materials have not increased. Our staff will continue to regularly watch hold lists and order additional copies of popular materials when necessary.

How do I learn more?

For more information, visit our website at www.cc-pl.org/fine-free.

Play, Explore, Build

This family-friendly STEAM-based program puts an emphasis on engineering. Build creations straight from your imagination while enjoying Campbell County parks 10 am-noon Saturday, Sept. 11 at Southgate Community Center Park and Sept. 25 at Alexandria's A.J. Jolly Park. The library will supply all the necessary building materials. Attendees will also be entertained by a balloon artist from Cincinnati Circus!

Library Card Photo Contest

We're celebrating Library Card Sign Up Month with a contest! To enter, snap a photo with your library card this month and submit it on our website. Five winners will be randomly selected to win a free shopping spree of the Newport Branch's Friends Book Sale area and a CCPL-themed prize pack. All ages are eligible to win.
